- Greater surveying to understand experience of ASB
- Programmes targeting young people and families most at risk of turning to crime and anti-social behaviour

Change for social housing tenants

Action Plan puts great focus on better understanding where anti-social behaviour is happening, how to tackle it and hold agents to account for enforcing against anti-social behaviour.

The action plan specifically commits to:

- work with police, local authorities courts and housing providers to improve overall quality of local data
- a digital one-stop-shop where people can report anti-social behaviour to the right local responders and get feedback on the response.

Other commitments include:

- Setting clear expectations that social landlords' existing powers of allocation and eviction are exercised in a timely fashion
- Updating social housing allocations guidance to be clear that evidence of committing anti-social behaviour should be used to de-prioritise anti-social behaviour perpetrators
- Exploring a “three strikes and you’re out” eviction expectation for all social landlords
